

Closure of EAT Café

Drexel is grateful to the patrons, donors, and supporters who have eaten, given and cheered on the EAT Café restaurant where all could dine no matter their ability to pay. The University, through the Center for Hunger-Free Communities, was delighted to serve everyone at the table for more than two and a half years.

However, due to rising costs of operations and a loss of funding, the EAT Café is unable to continue providing high quality food service for patrons and reasonable pay for staff. As a result, the Café will be closing its doors on April 19, 2019.

Drexel thanks the West Philadelphia community for embracing and welcoming the EAT Café into its vibrant community. Although the Café is closing, the Center for Hunger-Free Communities will continue its efforts to bring everyone to the table and to end hunger in communities. The Center is currently exploring opportunities for other nutrition programming and partnerships
